

Lodi Veterinary Clinic

Scope: Veterinary Clinic Renovation & Expansion

Location: Lodi, Wisconsin

Designer: Ramaker Architecture + Engineering

This year-long project involved adding more than 14,000 square feet to the existing building to create a new facility of more than 28,000 square feet, as well as a complete renovation of the existing structure. The new structure includes both wood and masonry walls and a precast mechanical storage area. The project also included major additions and reworking of the entire mechanical, plumbing, and electrical systems.

A groundbreaking was held in early November, followed by the installation of footings and foundation. The decision was made to get the walls and roof on first, with floor slabs and underslab utilities installed at the end of winter to reduce the costs of winter construction and to expedite the project schedule.

The new large animal area features ceilings that are five feet taller than the existing structure and includes masonry cubicles for the animals and a more durable interior finish to allow for complete hose down of all animal areas. One of the last elements of the project to be completed was the equine area where new masonry walls replaced outdated wood structures and now allow for easy clean up.

This project was recognized by the Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) of Wisconsin as a 2017 Silver Project of Distinction.
